The Real Issue.

Under the caption (quoted), the Cincinnati Gazette of the 12th makes a statement that its party range itself in support of the "reconstruction laws" as the only real issue. It says "we understand that the campaign will be fought upon the real issue of Reconstruction. What that the Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency has taught us:

It is idle to talk of bonds, greenbacks, gold, the public faith and the public credit. We must have a President who will execute the law, and the people by counting up into that the usurpations of Congress known as the reconstruction acts. I was to stand before the convention upon this subject last night, and I said, 'I embrace each thing else.'

The Gazette goes on, and we want to give the gist of the whole article, by reprinting claiming that

"Who, then, is the one issue of the campaign? Who, in the explicit declaration of the Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency, 'embraces everything else,' except the conviction of the party ready his declaration? He declares it to be the pronouncing the reconstruction acts revolutionary and void, and then delivers his address in the best man to carry it out."

"Strive then as we may to avoid it, the Democratic party persists in forcing the old issue, and declaring that the people shall take that issue. We insist that our speakers and papers shall treat it as the issue of Reconstruction, and shall leave it there."

Without stopping to ask where is the "old issue" in the new and vital issues which the Democracy has made out of the practices of the Radicals in their Reconstruction feats, we may express gratification that even one Radical journal shows an inclination to defend that which the Democrats attack with all their might as the "real issue" of the campaign. There is no doubt about it that the Radicals have signaled their spirit which they are engaged to follow, and have illustrated their utter recklessness for personal rights and liberties through which they would retain power more directly and distinctly through their Reconstruction acts than anything else. Hence the Democracy assail those acts as the most "shining lights" of the genius of Radicalism. If that party turn on the defensive, the Democracy have every reason to be satisfied. The Gazette negatives the severity with which it affects to treat Mr. Seymour and Frank Blair by the acknowledgment of their ought to be taken as the reflections necessary, that "the Convention of the party" informed Mr. Blair's declaration of policy "by pronouncing the Reconstruction acts revolutionary and void and then deliberately chose him as one of its candidates. There's where the Democracy stand. Read its platform, and no one need doubt about where it plants its central shaft against the monstrosities of the Radical party—"Immediate restoration of all the State to their rights in the Union under the and reputation, the People will have their revenge on the men who made the error, and who therefore put the country in a position to require repudiation. Revolution always repudiates the debts of its authors.

The foregoing is from the New York Herald of the 11th inst. It contains suggestions for future consideration, as well as being suggestive of the prospects immediately before us. The election of Seymour is felt to be a necessity; a necessity to which many unwillingly bow, with the Herald, because of "the deepest sense of the outrages" perpetrated by the Radical leaders. So deep and simple was the love of the masses of our countrymen for the "Culiac" that even the power of a frightful war would have been overlooked by retaining in office those who had apparently successfully conducted it, had they not disclosed their true features in their worst rapacities since the war closed. "Let the decision be positive—one side or the other—or there is our only safety," adds the Herald. And from the way it talks lately, there is no difficulty in discovering on which side it thinks the decision will be positive! It points out the only danger of civil war to consist in the decision of the Presidential "Culiac" in favour of the "Radicals," and the "Culiac" to the Southern vote. And truly therein lies the only danger—a danger which we see evidences of a wish of the wisest Republicans to avoid. We cannot expect a fair election in the South. Three States are forbidden to vote. But there may be trouble if a decision is sought to be made by Radical fraud practiced, in either way, to control the Southern vote. The Democracy of the "free States," by an almost unanimous vote, will dissipate the danger.

MEXICO.—General Rosecrans is availing his "instructive" from Mr. Seward on the eve of his departure for Mexico, so the dispatches tell us, although we think that he will not depart on that mission till "the Northerners" of late September or early October drive the "villains" from Vera Cruz. The dispatches of Mr. Seward will doubtless be as pompous and swelling as if directed to a potentate in China or Japan! A minister, in the present state of affairs, might as well be counted out. Any other Indian, of our frontier tribes, would be just as good. It is only authority he holds in Mexico, that controlled by financial influence over officers in different parts of that country. From every source of information, the camp-fires of chronic revolution burn all over the country. The government of Juarez is not half so compact nor so extensively recognized as was that of the ill-starred Maximilian. The rivalries against an Indian chief, destitute of any of that dash which distinguished Miramón, are naturally more numerous than those which a foreign-born potentate could excite. All business has utterly prostrated; the treasury is empty; the roads more unsafe than ever before, and all public improvements at a dead stand. A Minister of the United States there, under the present circumstances, can but perform the role of our Indian agents in treating with the tribes to which they are "accredited;" arrange some financial matters out of which some "rings" will pocket the proceeds.

In other times, in other days, it is trusted not far off, with a return of men to the direction of affairs who will re-establish confidence at home and re-open the well springs of prosperity and government. Ability and character, a desire from his government to do right, that repose and sober earnestness in Mexico which will open to us the rapid growth of a commerce and trade of the richest and most beautiful domains of earth. Our people turn to the settlement of Mexico; but a party which cannot compose its own country, must be without influence in controlling any other.

THE BUSINESS INTERESTS OF THE COUNTRY—are in a state of unparalleled prostration. The New York letter-writer of the Philadelphia Ledger says that "business of all kinds continues excessively dull. The dry-goods dealers are beginning to grumble at the non-payment of their bills, and the foreign imports, the greater portion of which goes into warehouse," and in every city, East and West, intelligent merchants feel in the same way. There is universal stagnation, which will grow worse up to the day of election. For disguise it as we may attempt, it is the absence of repose and confidence, and the silencing of the most valuable producing section of the country, which causes the stagnation and unsettled condition of the markets. Our imports nearly double our exports, and this drains all that gold from the country which the Radicals profess to be "paying out of the debt of the nation" which they have got rid of by increasing. No man in business feels any confidence in what he is going to do in case Grant is elected. On the contrary with the election of Seymour the whole country will feel freer, and trade and business will revive.

More Threats.

The New York Tribune of the 11th says that one "inevitable consequence" of the election of Seymour and Blair "will be a popular verdict against the whole Reconstruction policy of Congress, and especially against the right of the blacks to vote," and that they "will treat the new State governments as nullities, and proceed at once to replace them by what they call 'White Men's governments'—that is, governments based on their good-faith and honesty. They will be reinstated, and that bloodshed and anarchy will result, are inevitable." But even this, the Tribune will discover fails "to wear worth a dime." Governments will be restored, not reconstructed, in the South, based upon "the good pleasure" of the white citizens of the several States interested respectively. That is exactly what the Democracy propose. If therefore the Radicals take up arms "inevitably" they will have a good thing to say.

Our elections and nominations are now all made. Our nominees for Congress is one who will draw out the full vote of the District. That he will be as indefatigable as his health will permit, and work as faithfully as if his election was doubtful, all who know him are aware. Let us prepare then in earnest to make up and overtop our proud, August, majority of ninety thousand in November!
